Why Chittorgarh?

Chittorgarh – Agriculture, Dairy & Business Opportunities Hub

Chittorgarh, located in southern Rajasthan and sharing its boundary with Madhya Pradesh, is one of the most promising and fast-developing agricultural districts in the state.

The region is known for the large-scale cultivation of wheat, maize, mustard, and pulses, and is also one of the few licensed zones in India permitted for opium (poppy) cultivation.

In recent years, farmers of Chittorgarh have embraced modern and diversified agriculture, focusing on horticulture crops such as pomegranate, guava, custard apple (sitafal), papaya, vegetables, and flowers, cultivated on a commercial scale.

This shift towards high-value farming has strengthened both income and agri-enterprise potential in the district.

Dairy plays a vital role in the rural economy of Chittorgarh.

Thousands of farmers are engaged in milk production and allied activities, supported by rapidly expanding dairy cooperatives.

With rising demand for milk and milk-based products, the district offers excellent prospects for milk-processing units, cold-storage facilities, and allied dairy industries.

Supported by progressive farmers and modern techniques, Chittorgarh is steadily emerging as a balanced hub of crops, dairy, and agri-business growth in southern Rajasthan.

Connectivity Advantage

Chittorgarh holds a strategic position with seamless connectivity across western and central India.

Situated on the Delhi–Ahmedabad–Udaipur railway corridor, the district offers direct links to major metro cities.

A network of National and State Highways connects Chittorgarh efficiently with Rajasthan, Madhya Pradesh, Gujarat, and Delhi, complemented by regular bus services.

The nearest airports – Udaipur (90 km) and Kota (180 km) – ensure easy access from all major cities of India.

With its central location and excellent infrastructure, Chittorgarh has become a gateway for agriculture, dairy, trade, and investment opportunities.
